A Night to Remember is a 1955 non-fiction book by Walter Lord that depicts the sinking of the Titanic in 1912. After the discovery of the wreck of the Titanic, a new wave of public interest in the shipwreck story emerged, and the story of the ship's sinking gained new prominence. The author of Down With the Old Canoe, Steven Biel, discusses the cultural impact of the Titanic disaster and its various interpretations over time. He notes that the story of the Titanic has been told in many different ways, from the factual accounts of the disaster to the more imaginative and romanticized versions of the event. The book explores how the story of the Titanic has been used to reflect on the cultural values and attitudes of its era, and how it continues to be a source of inspiration and reflection today. The book also includes a new afterword that reflects on the ways in which the Titanic story has been told and understood over time.
